Get to know the online collection of USP's Ipiranga Museum

USP's Ipiranga Museum was integrated into the University of São Paulo in 1963, but even before the official integration the museum was already an important branch of research and activities of USP's academic community. Recently, the museum inaugurated a new website which hosts its collection of paintings, documents, and sculptures. Virtually, the public is able to admire the artworks and also find out more about the research projects that take place at the museum. The website's objective is to make the museum's universe and collection more accessible.

UC Irvine's graduate programs shine in U.S. News & World Report rankings

UCI's program in education shines as nine advanced study fields rank in the top 20 among public universities in U.S. News & World Report's 2023-24 graduate school rankings. This recognition solidifies UCI as a premier destination for graduate degrees. The School of Education stands out, securing fourth place among public universities and 11th overall. Frances Contreras, dean and professor, attributes these accolades to the school's exceptional research, academic programs, dedicated staff, and scholarly community.

Utrecht University

Netherlands

The European Commission has designated the Utrecht region as Europe's most competitive region, according to last month's Regional Competitiveness Index. Utrecht University is proud to be one of the drivers of the regional knowledge ecosystem. Researchers compared 234 European regions on almost 70 indicators. Utrecht scored highest on education level and innovation. Utrecht continues to score high on the share of highly educated labour force, innovation and market size. The study further reveals that the labour market opportunities of young people in Utrecht are very high compared to other regions and that there is a very high labour market participation of women which is linked to their high level of education in Utrecht.
